Can't get Arab opinion by talking with Jews' Dayan talks to pro-PLO Gaza leader

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan travelled to Gaza yesterday. e he met for 90 minutes with a well-known PLO supporter, Dr. Haider Abdul-Shafi. It was his second visit to the region this summer, although the first was said to be ological" in nature. Following the meeting, which took place at the Gaza military government beadquarters, Dayan told reporters that the purpose of his visit was "to get some answers on how Brael and the Arabs can live ingether. You can't get the Arab opt-nion by sitting and talking with Jews," said the foreign minister. Dayan denied that he was in Gaza to conduct negotiations 'on nomy or any other matter." But political observers noted that Dayan's talks with Shafi followed by a day his decision to participate actively in the ministerial negotiating team on autonomy, which convened on Tuesday.

Davan did not meet with Gaza Mayor Rashad Shawwa or any other municipal leaders during his visit, explaining that "when I visit the (administered) territories, I don't meet with public officials because I don't want to give the impression of involving myself in the affairs of other ministries." Dayan added that he was interested in exchanging views 'as human beings.'

Asked if he was aware of Shafi's outspokenly pro-PLO position, the foreign minister replied, "I am familiar with Shafi and that is exact ly why I wanted to meet with him." He noted that the physician, who heads the Gaza Red Crescent Society, is a popular figure in the strip. Shafi, who before the 1967 war was chairman of the parliament of Ahmed Shukeiry's Palestine Liberation

Organization in Gaza, was twice exiled by the military government to Sinai for his political activities during Dayan's term as defence minister in the Labour government. Informed sources suggest that one reason for Dayan's talks with the Gaza doctor was that, despite his public pronouncements, Shafi might be more willing to talk about normalization with Egypt than Mayor Shawwa. Also, says the source, Shafi's Red Crescent Society may be used as an intermediary between Gaza and Egypt, since the Foreign Ministry objects to using the Red Cross, UNESCO or any other international organization as a lisison

In an interview with The Jerusalem Post, Shafi described the talks with Dayan as "academic and theoretical," although he admitted (Continued on page 2, cel. 2)

The list of 120 candidates for the Executive - which is to become Herut's most important decisionmaking body — was drawn up by a committee headed by Levy. The uproar started almost as soon as Levy read the names on the list and a list of reserve members. It subsided only briefly when Sharon took the rostrum to announce that he would not serve on the Executive.

Sharon told the cheering audience that he opposes the "way the Ex-ecutive was chosen. It is all too reminiscent of the way the Central Committee members were picked. The same band which manipulated things then is pulling the strings now," he said, referring to Levy.

Sharon announced that he plans to be an active member of the larger Central Committee — which meets only four times annually — ''in order to help the government carry out its mission. It is time all ministries lent a hand to boost settlement." he said. Then taking a broad swipe at Levy, he added, "It is time that in the field of housing we ceased just talking and began doing." Levy came back quickly. He said Sharon had "insulted and hurt" him in his reference to too much talk on solving Israel's housing woes. "I am not ashamed of my actions. From this day on I will refer to my critic as Mr. Sharon and no longer as my friend Arik. I, who took upon myself to lessen the housing shortage, was blamed for it. My political rivals are attempting to identify the problem with the man who is tackling it."

As to Sharon's charges of highhandedness in smoke-filled rooms Levy said he was "proud of the hand that Sharon accuses of arranging things. I will continue to struggle to advance party members from the periphery and small branches."

The verbal battle took place despite Begin's appeal to his ministers to turn over a new leaf and to settle their differences discreetly and not in public.

Sharon later explained to reporters that only he and four supporters from the erstwhile Shlomzion Party made the Executive. He said that his four allies would probably quit along with him. Levy, in effect, said "good riddance, stating that those next in line on the (Continued on page 2, col. 4)

Jerusalem Post Correspondent WASHINGTON. -- The U.S., in its strongest statement to date. yesterday called Israel's policy of pre-emptive strikes against Palestinian terrorist

In a carefully prepared address, outgoing U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young told the UN Security Council that Israel's recent military actions in Lebanon "are painfully at variance with the values which Israel has traditionally es-

For the first time, the U.S. implied that Israel was involved in acts of terror by its bombing raids. Young said that the "deadlock of terror and counter-terror in which both sides seemed to be caught" must be

In the past, the U.S. has always refrained from equating so specifically Palestinian terrorism and the Israeli response. The American officials had earlier referred to Israel's actions as "violence" but not as "counterterror."

Young's speech was drafted and cleared by senior Carter administration officials, and merely read by the controversial envoy, who resigned earlier this month following a secret meeting with a PLO representative. Young is council president for August.

U.S. officials here stressed that Young's speech did not represent his personal views, but those of the entire U.S. government. The Security Council convened yesterday at the request of the Lebanese government to take up the latest flareup in the area. Council members are expected to continue their deliberations today.

U.S. sources expect that the council will dispatch former British ambassador Ivor Richard on a factfinding mission to Lebanon, rather than approve another new resolution.

"Israel should end its policy of pre-emptive strikes on Lebanese soil," tillery attacks in support of Lebanese militia groups and use its influence effectively over these groups so that random and indiscriminate violence can be stopped, especially against the men of UNIFIL." UNIFIL is the UN Interim Force in Lebanon.

At the same time, Young called upon the Palestinian leadership "to carry out its pledge of June 5 to withdraw its fighters from Southern Lebanese villages and towns and remove all its armed groups from UNIFIL's area of operation.

Pointedly, Young mentioned last week's UN debate on Palestinian rights, "If there is a strengthened understanding in my country of the importance of assuring that the legitimate rights of the Palestinians are included in a comprehensive settlement — and I believe there is then it is time for the Palestinian leadership to recognize that their objectives cannot be achieved through violence and terrorism."
Young continued: "It is time, past time, for wiser counsel to prevail on both sides of the border between Lebanon and Israel.

There was no specific mention of the PLO in the speech.

At one point, Young said only that "we condemn those who boast of the murder of an Israeli mother and her child, the attack on a bus filled with Israeli civilians, or the explosion of rockets and bombs in Israeli towns and cities. No political objective can ever justify such barbarism."

Consistent with the long-standing

U.S. position, the speech did not stipulate that the PLO had accepted responsibility for those and other similar acts of terror. But Israel and its Christian allies were specifically condemned and "just as strongly."

"We condemn the policy of artillery shelling and preemptive attacks on Lebanese towns, villages and refugee camps which Israel and the armed Lebanese groups Israel supports have followed in recent months. Let there be no doubt or ambiguity about this. We cannot and do not agree with Israel's military policies in Lebanon, as manifested in

Egypt oil minister apparently not coming

 Pest Economic Reporter Egyptian Oil Minister Hilal Ahmed Ezzedin will apparently not be coming to Israel this week, as was originally planned.

The Energy Ministry spokesman was evasive when asked about the planned visit, and was equally evasive when the possibility was mooted of Energy Minister Yitzhak Moda'i visiting Egypt instead.

It is believed that the question of oil may, in fact, be discussed at a higher level - between Prime Minister Menahem Begin and President Anwar Sadat in Haifa next week.

NRP heads meet Begin to discuss cabinet malfunction

By ASHER WALLFISH Jerusalem Post Reporter

HOME NEWS

The National Religious Party ministers and the chairman of the Knesset faction yesterday met with Prime Minister Menahem Begin to discuss ways of getting the cabinet to function more smoothly and effectively.

The NRP leaders said that cabinet ministers must be made to coordinate their moves and work together so that the effect was constructive and not obstructive, as was regrettably the case from time to Education Minister Zevulun Hammer reportedly said that the cabinet flasco last month over the subsidies need never have happened had there been proper coordination between the ministers, and had the cabinet session devoted to subsidies been planned properly beforehand. Hammer reportedly said that Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan's remarks this week about policy in Southern Lebanon had not contributed to cabinet harmony.

Begin is understood to have replied to the NRP men that he took their complaints very seriously. He said he wanted time to think them over, and suggested a second meeting next month.

Faction chairman Yehuda Ben-Meir said later that both sides had spoken with complete frankness, and he hoped that there would soon be an improvement in the functioning of the cabinet.

Police can't confirm Amman threat to halt salaries

By IAN BLACK

Jerusalem Post Reporter Senior police sources know nothing about reports that the Jordanian government is threatening to halt salary payments to its employees who now work for the Israel Police in Judea and Samaria.

Arab policemen on the West Bank are nevertheless planning to send a delegation to Amman to verify whether the reports are correct and whether they will have to stop work-ing for Israel if they are to continue drawing their Jordanian salaries. A senior officer in the Judea District could not confirm yesterday that Arab policemen under his command were aware of the rumoured step. But he surmised that this might be merely because the time has not yet come for them to receive their salaries from Amman. Press reports during the past few days said that Jordan is threatening to stop the salaries of some 600 Arab policemen in the West Bank, who were employed in the Jordanian police force before the 1967 war. Reports have also said that Amman will continue to pay all Araba who resign from the Israeli force, or the condition that they can prove in the form of a letter from the mayor of the area where they live that they are faithful to the Palestinian cause.

Observers have noted in this connection that the Camp David autonomy scheme calls for the creation of a police force that would presumably be composed of Arabs currently working or serving with the Israel police.

Police sources yesterday attributed the report to the "war of nerves" being waged by Jordan to express opposition to Israel and the autonomy plan.

Jordan has threatened several times since 1967 to halt payments to its former employees who now work for Israel. As yet, however, they have never carried out this threat.

Hebron mayor permitted to visit U.S.

By IAN BLACK Jerusalem Post Reporter

Hebron Mayor Fahd Kawasma has been given permission by the military authorities to attend a number of pro-Palestinian meetings in the U.S. next month.

The Jerusalem Post learned yesterday that Kawasma has been granted permission to leave for Washington although he has in the past defied standing military government orders. Senior military sources said earlier this week that requests by public figures from the administered territories to travel abroad would be judged individually on the basis of their obedience to the authorities and the extent to which they have criticized Israel.

Nablus Mayor Bassam Shaka and Mayor Mohammed Milhem of Halhoul have been refused permission to visit the U.S. Karim Khalaf, the mayor of Ramallah, is presently in Washington.

Kawasma told The Post recently that if allowed to visit America he would agree to meet with administration officials but that he would not hold discussions with them on the basis of the Camp David autonomy.

Tourist bus bombing disaster averted

By BENNY MORRIS Jerusalem Post Reporter

In two separate Jerusalem bomb incidents yesterday, one man was seriously injured and a major disaster was averted when a bomb was found attached to a tourist bus. In the first incident, police said a "small bomb" exploded on Derech Hevron, opposite the Ariel Hotel, severely injuring Yehezkel Ben-Yitzhak Hoshangi. The man, a 50-year-old father of nine, was in Hadassah University Hospital last night, after surgeons worked through the day on damage tione to his leg and genitals.

In the second incident, a Nazarethbased bus driver, Fuad Hassan, spotted a "fairly large" suspicious object taped to the undercarriage of his tourist bus when he brought it in for an oil change at a garage opposite the U.S. consulate in East Jerusalem.

Hassan, 48, and a garage hand on the scene immediately called the police, who dismantled the bomb. The bus had spent Tuesday in Much depends on the current debate in the UN Security Council, observers here feel, but in the ultimate analysis, they are convinced the shooting will resume since Lebanon is the only arena from which the PLO can demonstrate that it is still active at the forefront of the Palestinian struggle against Israel. In the area under the control of Haddad all was quiet yesterday, and the major assured reporters at his Marjayoun office yesterday morning that he had no intention of breaking the cease-fire. Whether the fighting is renewed or not, Haddad said, is entirely up to the terrorists. Seven people were killed by terrorist fire in the enclaves over the weekend, including one entire family.

Both Haddad's forces and the terrorists are using the current lull in the fighting to improve their positions. The terrorists are apparently moving in artillery and im-proving their positions, while Haddad's men have encroached on several strategically important areas on the periphery of the area under UNIFIL control.

In general, IDF and "Independent Lebanese" officers spoken to yesterday had few complaints about UNIFIL, indicating that press reports of tension are exaggerated. Yet, severe complaints were levelled against the Irish contingent which, it is claimed, is not "making the slightest effort" in carrying out their job of controlling the terrorists.

On the other hand, it was pointed out, the performance of the battalion from Fiji was much appreciated. and since the changeover in the Nigerian and the Norwegian battalions several months ago, relations between the parties have improved dramatically.

According to the Gazan, Dayan asked if such a state would want to have open borders with Israel. "I told him that it would, once an agreemeni was reached with the PLO. Open borders would be essential to the region," added Shafi. Shafi said he does not think Gaza notables would particiate in the autonomy plan because the Camp David accords don't recognize their right to self-determination.

Accompanying the foreign minister in his talks were Gaza military governor Tat-Aluf Yitzhak Segev and Yosef Hadas, who heads the Foreign Ministry committee responsible for expediting normalization with Egypt.

Asher Wallfish adds:

Dayan is understood to have told ome of his colleagues fairly recently that he intended to meet with Shafi. According to one cabinet minister, Dayan decided that in order to learn something about PLO thinking at a time when the talks on autonomy were beginning to shift into matters of substance, there was no point in talking to moderates, but only to outand out PLO sympathizers like the Gaza physician.

This minister said that moderate Arab figures in the areas were not going to approve the autonomy talks whatever happened, no matter what efforts the U.S. might make, because they were plainly and simply scared. Prospects for the future, if any, could only be studied if the bull were seized by the horns, in Dayan's view.

There was no intention on Dayan's part of sounding out the PLO's attitude to its participation in talks, this minister said, since the Camp David agreements did not allow for this, and it played no part in the government's policy anyway.

The question rather was to study the prospects of the PLO halting its intimidation against Arab personalities who might agree to join either the Egyptian delegation to the talks, today, or the Jordanian delegation, at some distant future date. There was no confirmation in Jerusalem last night that Dayan had similar conversations with Arab personalities in Judea and Samaria. Sources in the military government and the Foreign Ministry discounted rumours to this effect, saying that Dayan had met no West Bankers recently. Several well-known notables disclaimed all knowledge of such meetings.

The settler, Ami Shor, said he led a quiet life. He confirmed he carried a gun at night. "But that's like carrying a box of cigarettes in your pocket," he maintained.

The visit made an impact. 'There are some people you want to help and some who don't deservee it." William Goodman of Orlando, Florida, observed. "When you see people industrious, struggling — you want to extend a helping hand," he added. (More UlA stories, page ?)

Conceding that 4,300 returness under the programme out of a total of more than $50,000 yordim abroad do not mean a revolution, each returnee is a "blessing." Levy asserted that benefits were funded within the ministry's regular budget, and that only IL2m. extra was spent for the media campaign and listing pro-

Levy cited figures provided by the Central Bureau of Statistics showing a steady decrease in the number of yordim, but since an emigrant is defined as someone who left the country four years ago, recent figures are only estimates. In 1977 there were 12,500 emigrants, and last year there were 10,000, according to the CBS. With this tapering off of yerida accompanied by an increasing number of returnees, said Levy, "we are apparently seeing a slowdown in the increase of Israelis living aboard." Turning to absorption, Levy said that he, Prime Minister Menahem Begin and Jewish Agency officials would soon announce progress on the long-term dispute over which institution is granted authority for aliya and absorption. Levy said that Begin has endorsed his proposal for a "national absorption administration" that would allow the Agency's aliya department and the ministry to continue functioning separately while cooperating in implementing policy formulated in the administration.

But a spokesman for Agency Executive chairman Arye Dulzin said yesterday that "this is a new proposal Dulzin has never heard before." The spokesman said that the original scheme put implementation in the hands of the Agency. while Levy's 'new' proposal made it jointly controlled — a notion that the Agency rejects.

Raising his voice at the press conference, Levy angrily denounced a small group of olim living in the Hadera and Atlit absorption centres who have been placing advertisements and writing petitions for distribution abroad calling absorption officials "Nazis" and "terrorists" because of the shortage of immigrant housing.

"These expressions are dangerous," Levy stated, adding that many of the olim who are complaining have been offered flats that they subsequently turned down. He concluded that two-thirds of all immigrants living in absorption centres leave their temporary quarters for permanent housing within nine months of arrival.

Shmueli said that some 1,000 up qualified teachers will be teaching this year, including third-year students from teacher training

Big response to first VAT lottery draw

By SHLOMO MAOZ Post Economic Reporter

Some 40,000 entries to the VAT receipt lottery have so far been received. One of them stands to win IL100,000 in the first draw, due on Tuesday. The draw will be run by Mifal Hapayis.

The prizes will be free of tax, customs director Yebezkel Abulafia said vesterday.

Participation is open to any consumer who sends VAT receipts for a minimum of IL5,000 in an envelope to the VAT authorities. The receipts must be legally acceptable and include the VAT registration number of the firm that sold the goods.

The public committee set up to run the lottery, headed by Alex Rafaeli, director of Jerusalem Pencils, is due to meet today.

Tuesday's draw is one of two intermediate draws in each series. A series will also include a main draw. in which all the entrants who participated in each intermediate draw will take part. Prizes in the intermediate draws will be one of IL100,000, five of IL25,000 each, and 1,000 of IL1,000 each. In the main draw the big prize will be IL1,000,-000, the second prize IL250,000 and there will be five third prizes of IL100.000.

Another 1,000 entrants will get sums equivalent to the total on the receipts they submitted, up to a celling of IL10,000.

Customs authorities are happy about the public response to the lottery. They say participants have submitted numbers of complaints about businesses which do not give receipts as required by the VAT laws or do not use cash registers. Some instances were found even in the big marketing organizations.

The receipts sent in to the lottery will be put into a computer afterwards by the VAT authorities to check on the VAT returns submitted by retailers.

Thatcher flies to Ulster to cheer British troops

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher flew unexpectedly to Northern Ireland yesterday after ordering troops to guard Queen Elizabeth following Monday's terrorist assassination of Lord Mountbatten.

Five jeeploads of soldiers took up positions at Balmoral Castle, Scotland, one of the queen's four homes. Normally the monarch is guarded by two detectives armed

Thatcher flew to express solidarity with garrison troops in Northern Ireland after Monday's massacre of 18 British soldiers by the Provisional Iriah Republican Army (IRA). At Belfast's Musgrave Park

Hospital, on the edge of the Catholic Falls Road area, she autographed plaster casts for wounded soldiers.

Traffic in the city centre later ground to a halt and a crowd of hundreds pressed round Thatcher as she walked briskly in shopping streets protected from bombs by a guarded security fence.

The tensions of Belfast flared to the surface as a middle-aged Catholic woman pushed through police and started shouting a protest against conditions of IRA prisoners in Long Kesh prison. Protestant "loyalists" shouted back, and an icecream was hurled - although not at Thatcher. The incident ended when police led the still shouting woman

Thatcher went on to hastily convened talks with British Army commanders and police chiefs. She also met local political leaders.

Amid fears of a backlash by extremist Protestants, a 48-year-old Catholic father of 10 was shot dead in Belfast on Tuesday night. A petrol bomb was thrown yesterday at an Irish social club in the English Midlands city of Nottingham, but did no damage.

The body of Lord Mountbatten, last Viceroy of India and uncle of the queen's husband, Prince Philip, willbe flown to Britain later this week. His funeral will be next Wednesday.

Irish police believe the 25-kg. bomb which killed him and two relatives may have been planted in a lobster pot slung over the side of Lord Mountbatten's boat. It could have been triggered from the shore by the sort of radio used to control model seroplanes, or exploded by a "trembler" device which would activate the bomb on the smallest movement, Mullaghmore, the little northwest ireland port where Lord Mountbatten was on holiday, has been taken over by more than 100 Irish Republic police specialists and uniformed men.

In Dublin, the Irish government offered a £100,000 (about ILSm.) reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killers of Lord Mountbatten. The offer came from Deputy Premier George Colley after an emergency cabinet meeting.

South Korea seeking relations with PLO

Observers expect Foreign Minister Park Tong Jin to outline plans for informal talks with the PLO when he visits Saudi Arabia and Kuwait in mid-September.

Rhodesia ready to show off captured Frelimo soldiers

MAGUNGE, Zimbabwe-Rhodesia (Reuter). — Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa vesterdav accused Mozambique of infiltrating its armed forces into Patriotic Front guerrilla units fighting the bush war in Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

Bishop Muzorewa, addressing about 500 in this remote northern village, said, "We have captured some of these Frelimo soldiers and they are still being held."

He said the Mozambique prisoners were "here for everyone to see and who requires to prove to themselves that what I say is the truth."

KAMPALA (UPI). - With law and order on the point of total collapse in Uganda, foreign diplomats and UN officials yesterday demanded greater protection and indicated: they might soon abandon the troubled country entirely.

Former internal affairs minister Lutakome Kaylira underscored the rising tension in the Uganda capital when he accused Tanzanian occupation troops of using "brutal methods" in Ugandan prisons to ex-tract information on the burgeoning opposition movements to embattled President Godfrey Binaisa.

In a separate development, several charges against British-born Bob Astles, at one time overthrown president Idi Amin's closest confidant, have been consolidated and he will now be tried before a chief magistrate on the simplified charges in an effort to get a conviction. Following a fresh spate of weekend murders in the capital including a British professor and an Italian businessman - and with the city tottering on the edge of anarchy, diplomats from every foreign mis-sion in Uganda yesterday agreed to send a delegation "at the highest level" to demand increased military protection for their embassies and

We still have to create a sense of the importance of this kind of thing in the eyes of the policy-makers. The image of the kind of 'think-tank' we want to create," he says, "is of abstract thinking. DR. ANDREW SKLOVER cares so much about the Soviet Jewish dropout problem that it has become simost an obsession.

Having visited the drop-outs in Ostia, Italy at his own expense, the 38-year-old American orthodontist decided that he had to straighten out Jewish leaders in the U.S. and in Israel about the dimensions of what he calls "a tragedy that will turn out to be another Holocaust.' As a volunteer for the United idnappin Jewish Appeal in New Jersey's Bergen County, Sklover was asked to help the local Jewish federation's Russian Resettlement Committee. Last September, HIAS asked the committee to accept 100 Russian Jews who left the Soviet Union on er eine eine bereite ber Israeli visas but had decided to seek their fortunes in the U.S.

"I ripped up the letter. I was against the idea, even though I didn't have been though I didn't have anything about the problem.

But it bothered me. Then I decided that if I'm really against it, I must * of principal continue to serve on the committee." Shover recalls.

Tramass facts that would back up his put feeling, he met with officials of the Joint Distribution Committee, the UJA and HIAS in New York and then went to the resort town of Ostia near Rome where thousands of Russian Jews wait for U.S. visas.

"When I returned home, I decided that I had spent most of my life doing things that were important to me and my family, but not to the Jewish people," says Sklover, who volunteered as a nurse in Hadassah University Hospital's orthopaedic department in the Yom Kippur War and later as a kibbutz dentist.

SO SKLOVER decided then and there to devote a year to convincing his local Jewish federation - the seventh largest in the U.S. — to refuse to "take in" any Russian Jewish dropouts. Every night for three months, he called on federation board members and major contributors to convince them that the

- in line with what Elazar describes as their aim of being "on top of the Jewish agenda" - have also undertaken a study of the operations of the Jewish Agency, with special reference to the relationship between it and various ocal communities in Israel. This, the professor comments, coints to the desire of the Jerusalem Institute, "to fulfil a natural bridging orientation between world Jewry and Israel." This is also reflected in the cosmopolitan makeup of the institute's members — academics from the U.S., France, Israel and Australia.

THE FEDERAL side of the business is booming even more: it has undertaken studies for the Interior Ministry on the relationship between municipalities and central government; and for Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek on neighbourhood involvement in city

Continuing the "bridging orientation," the institute helped former U.S. Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano draw up an agreement for an educational exchange programme with Israel, and developed a two-week syllabus for teaching American government and society in Israeli schools.

One of the major projects under-taken by the federalists — at the re-based options for the future of the West Bank — a study which so impressed then Defence Minister

Elazar believes that the concept of the "shared rule" of contested territories is "creeping slowly to the centre of the stage" as an acceptable option for the future of the West Bank — perhaps the thorniest issue likely to be facing Israeli policy makers in the years to come.

Now, says Elezar cautiously, "I am prepared to defend the shared rule option as the most likely of 11 possible scenarios our researchers have established."

They have not, be notes, "excluded any option a priori but it is our basic assumption that there can be no third state between Jordan and Israel; that more than one predominantly Jewish and more than one predominantly Arab state in the Land of Israel is not in anyone's interests."

LIKE their colleagues in Jewish community research, the Jerusalem federalists have not stayed in their libraries or restricted themselves merely to the international conferences they regularly organize and Institute members, says Elszar, have met with leading figures in the U.S. administration, including the key assistant secretary of state for Near Eastern Affairs, Harold Saunders, as well as Congressional and other influential public figures.

They have also used their links with the American Enterprise Institution — "a kind of Republican version of Brookings" — to try and modify the traditional pro-Arab orientation of many U.S. policy makers.

Nearer home, the professor continues, the federalists have held talks with Palestinians, "who have come to recognize the benefits of close intercourse with Israel." Some of them, political scientists from Bir Zelt university, "admit that they feel impotent in the face of Israel. They want a state first and then they're prepared to consider mutual accom-modation."

He had a petition to that effect signed by 26 MKs representing all the parties in the Knesset. Jewish Agency Executive chairman Arye Dulzin provided him with a strong letter backing him up. Sklover also made an appointment with Yehiel Kadishai, Prime Minister Begin's personal secretary, to ask for help.

"Begin doesn't know that he can just tell American Jewry to stop helping the dropouts, and they'll stop," insists Sklover. "People will listen. The Premier of Israel is the only international Jewish leader. If he said that helping drop-outs is bad for Israel, they'd believe him." Sklover notes that many American Jews -mintakenly think that Begin has taken a low-key approach to the problem (suggesting compromises that might limit HIAS help only to those with first-degree relatives in the U.S.) because of an "unspoken reason. They think that Israel can't afford to absorb all of them or that the disadvantaged class in Israel oppose letting in Russian Jews."

THE DROP-OUT problem began as a "small mistake" nine years ago, says Sklover. "In 1970, a few Russian Jewish families told a middle-level clerk at the Jewish Agency that they didn't want to go to Israel because they had heard that life there was hard. That clerk, without authorization, took it upon himself to allow those emigres to switch their destination, thereby initiating a minute and insignificant shift in the flow of Jewish migration that has since become a torrent, a nightmare, a disgrace!' And since the American Jewish community is the main culprit in helping to increase the trickle to a torrent, says Sklover, so it should be the one to stop it.

While Palance lacks the artistry

JIMBUCK: Starring Jack Palance, Richard Rountree, Rod Steiger and Ann Turkel, Directed by Allan Buckhantz,

IT'S hell growing old, especially if you're a professional killer who wants to retire. And how difficult it is to go on living if you've just been given a contract to kill your best friend who, to complicate matters, has just seduced your woman. The whole game of survival becomes even more complex if you happen to be an aspiring artist whose brush technique is a cross between that of Salvador Dali and Rembrandt.

Jack Palance, as Jimbuck, master assassin and painter, manages to turn this situation into a hightension, blood-filled hour-and-a-half of filmed pandemonium. But you've got to give him credit, because he does it in style.

Jimbuck is democratic, killing whites, blacks and Chinese with equal ease. He's also got class. His girlfriend (Ann Turkel), his home, his pistols and even his paintbrushes have been collected with loving care. Jimbuck also has guts, which seem to be spilling out on the screen during most of the film. And, not least of all, he's got survivability. He manages to keep on despite the someone collects on his life in- he-she has been refusing to appear on

LA CAGE AUX FOLLES: Starring Ugo Toguzai, Michael Serranit, and Michael Calabru. Directed by Edouard Molinare.

WHAT HAPPENS when a transvestite meets up with the deputy-secretary of the Union for Moral Order? Feathers and tempers fly in this refreshing French farce, which pits society's outcasts against the French petits bourgeoisis and comes up with a hilarious solution to a moral impasse.
Albin (Michael Serrault) appears nightly in the club La Cage Aux Folles (The Cage of the Gays) as the divine diva Za-za. He is probably the hairiest female opera star ever featured on the silver screen.

A transvestite. Albin lives with the owner of the nightclub, Renato (Ugo Tognazzi). Off stage, as well as on, stage, accusing Renato of infidelity after 20 years. But the only other man in Renato's life is his handsome young son Laurent, whom he and Albin have raised since birth. When they discover Laurent is planning to marry a girl — they are mortified. Laurent, afraid to introduce his future in-laws to his father and 'surrogate mother,'' begs his father to take off his pencake makeup and go straight for one night - and to send Albin on vacation until the nuptials are sealed.

In the perfect comic set-up the father of the bride-to-be, a self-righteous petit bourgeois, who just happens to be the national deputysecretary of the Union for Moral Order, has been told that Laurent's father is a cultural attache.

The encounter between the two families is a comic bonanza, which should be commended for treating the stars, the transvestites, with great sensitivity. It is precisely this sensitivity and the faultless performances by Michael Serrault and Ugo Tagnazzi that make "La Cage" such a charming, novel film. That and the fact that "La Cage" takes good-natured aim at everyone in direct line of sight: the heavies, the fall

> Menahem Begin Prime Minister

The 1980 UJA Prime Minister's Mission inaugurates the Campaign year and offers us the opportunity to examine together the basic issues confronting us in the coming year. I am confident that you will bring back to your communities the message of commitment to those crucial tasks which require the total mobilization of our resources.

> Leon Dulzin Chairman of the Executive Jewish Agency for Israel

We have met the new, young pioneers of Israel in settlements and Youth Aliyah Villages and have been inspired by their idealism in building the land and the nation.

The members of the Prime Minister's Mission are men and women whose vision, courage and talent will set standards for our entire Community, exemplifying the Talmudic adage that "The true value of a benevolent deed lies in the love that mapires 'K'."

We return to the United States and Canada to raise more in peace than in war - for our commore than ever, we are one.

Young people greet Mission

THE FUTURE of Israel is its youth. It was fitting and proper that members of this younger generation - boys and girls from Ben Shemen Youth Village should greet the 300 delegates of the 1980 Prime Minister's Mission upon their arrival. The welcome was made official by Harry Hurwitz, adviser to the Prime Minister on information, who brought the group Mr. Begin's personal greetings.

Mr. Hurwitz also called to the Mission members' attention the significance of the time they were in Israel. Just 40 years ago this week, Mr. Hurwitz noted, the world was in the final days before the outbreak of World War II. With no state of their own and with no world support the Jewish population of Europe was decimated by the Holocaust. Now. as Mr. Hurwitz said, there is an Israel, a homeland for all Jews, and Jews around the world are aware that they must keep their destinies in their own hands.

The formal welcome at Ben Shemen, chaired by UJA Vice-Chairman Norman Lipoif of Miami, Florida, also had special significance for the UJA Mission because 88 per cent of the children in the 250 schools and youth villages throughout Israel now are Israeli-born and from disadvantaged backgrounds, many from Project Renewal neighbourhoods. the United States and Canada found the Ben Shemen Village found the ceremonies at the village particularly appropriate. Many facilities in this village, whose alumni include Knesset Members Shimon Peres, Shulamit Aloni and Moshe Katzav; are the gift of the family of the late Nick Newman. His widow, Raquel Newman, of San Francisco, Calif., also participated in the welcoming ceremonies.

Navon lauds 'the real soldiers'

"YOU ARE the real soldiers who do the everyday work of Israel." President Yitzhak Navon told delegates to the 1980 UJA Prime Minister's Mission, "not only by your economic contributions but also by the solidarity you express for Israel and its problems, its achievements and its future."

Mission delegates were guests of President and Mrs. Navon at a festive reception and dinner in the grounds of the presidential residence in Jerusalem.

Following the presidential reception, the Mission made its way to the Western Wall to pray in the warm night air for Jewish unity. Several of the Hassidim at the Wall paused in their pre-Rosh Hashana penitential prayers to listen to Ashkenazi Chief Rabbi Shlomo Goren appeal to the assembled Mission to assist Israel in its task of nationbuilding, immigrant absorption and defence. "The state belongs to the Jewish people," he said. "Every Jew should feel it is his home. We fought for it, built it, and cultivated its land for every Jew throughout the world. Clubs juggle players as soccer season nears

By PAUL KOHN

Post Sports Reporter TEL AVIV. - Some 80 soccer players have already been transferred from one club to another in the off-season. Monday is the deadline for signing players who are to appear for their new teams on the league opening day, September 8.

The most notable signing this week was Shimshon's acquisition of Yehshayahu Feigenbaum from Tel Aviv Hapoel. The $2-year old veteran striker has been with Tel Aviv Hapoel for 22 years, and was captain of the Hapoel team. Several years ago he regularly appeared in the international team forward line.

Shimson also expects to strengthen its defence with the imminent signing of Shraga Bar, from Ramat Gan Hapoel.

Another veteran national team player to switch clubs this week was Jaffa Maccabi defender Shlomo Ninio, who joined second division Ramat Gan Hapoel.

And yet another veteran international star who will be wearing a new shirt this season is Giora Spiegel, who Tel Aviv Maccabi released to play for newly promoted Ramat Gan Hakoah, the team now coached by Giora's former teammate and goalkeeper, Michael Kadosh. Giora, 34, has been with Tel Aviv Mcaccabi since the age of 10, except for a five-year spell as a professional in France.

Shlomo Kirat, who has played fine games for the national team in recent years, leaves Jerusalem Betar to join B'nei Yehnda, the Tel Aviv Hatikva quarter team. Goalkeeper Avi Sasson, another former Jerusalem Betar player, who was Tel Aviv Maccabi's reserve keeper last season, moves to Kfar Sava

The Netanya Maccabi attack will be strengthened by Victor Bonny, who joins them from second division

Beit Schea'an Hapoet. Earlier, Bonny was Haifa Hapoel forward. Another former Haifs Hapoel striker, Benny Alon, will play for newly promoted Ramat Amidar

Reputedly the most expensive signing was that of an "unknown," 23-year-old Nissim Cohen of second division Herzliya Maccabi, for whom Petah Tikva Maccabi paid a cool ILim. Forty per cent of this sum was reportedly paid to the player, with IL600,000 going into the Herzliya

Another expensive tag hangs around the feet of Ya'acov Buzaglo, for whom Tel Aviv Hapoel paid IL650,000 to Jerusalem Hapoel.

About a dozen players are currently at loose ends, not having agreed to terms with their parent clubs nor having been snapped up by other teams because their price tags appear too inflationary. Among e players are Tel Aviv Betar goalkeeper Avi Liberman and Hadera Hapoel keeper Roony Fried-

Tel Aviv Betar has transfer listed three of its best known players, offering them as a IL1,150,000 package deal. They are veteran striker Moshe Romano, goalkeeper Lieberman, both rated at IL500,000, and Amos Hassan. Jerusalem soccer circles were talking this week for another possi-ble big transfer, the move of Hapoel's stopper Ali Othman to Betar. The fee being discussed is

Transfer of players can continue until the midway point in the league season. The Football Association has authorized the transfer of three new players per club, though two more players can be played "on loan." The transfer market of soccer players is free of any controls, and can be negotiated freely between clubs and players.

U.S. Open: Top seeds take 1st round

NEW YORK (AP). — Top-seeded Bjorn Borg and defending champions Jimmy Connors and Chris Evert Lloyd all posted first-round victories on Tuesday in the U.S.

Open tennis championships.

For Borg and Lloyd it was easy.

Borg, the four-time Wimbledon champion who is trying for his first U.S. crown, downed Matt Mitchell 6-1, 6-1, 6-2. Lloyd, who is the topseeded woman, beat Iris Riedel of West Germany 6-0, 6-0.

Connors, who is seeded behind Borg, worked a little harder and beat India's Anand Amritraj 6-2, 6-4, 6-4. Connors, who has not had much tough competition since losing to Borg in the Wimbledon semi-finals two months ago, grunted and gasped as usual and seemed in good Amritraj broke his service once in the second set and once in the third. He made the three-time Open champion work, but there was never much chance for an upset. Connors won the final game at love.

Lloyd, who stands to win a record fifth consecutive women's title here. took just 45 minutes to oust Riedel. The champion wasn't pleased with having so light a workout. "The more I'm pressed, the better off I am in the later rounds," she said. "When the matches are easy, it's hard for 'me to know how well I'm playing."

Meanwhile, Italy's Adriano Panatta, the 15th seed, was an early casualty, falling to U.S. college singles champion Kevin Curren. Curren, a South African who attended the University of Texas, over-powered Panatta 6-3, 7-5, 7-6.

In other matches involving seeed players, No. 4 Vitas Gerulaitis downed Australian Mark Edmondson 6-8, 6-2, 7-5. The women's No. 4, Virginia Wade, beat American Paula Smith 6-8, 6-8, and No. 6 Dianne Fromholtz defeated fellow Australian Diane Evers 6-8, 6-2.

No surprises in Israel junor tennis

Post Sports Reporter RAMAT HASHARON. - Matches have gone largely according to form so far in the 1979 National Junior Tennis Championships at the Israel Tennis Centre here. The meet contimues at 9 a.m. today and concludes tomorrow, with the singles finals scheduled to be played at 3.30 p.m.

In the boys' under-18 singles, the semi-final line-up is Tommy Frischer or Gil Shachar versus Steve Rosenberg, and Shahar Perkis against Yong Rahaminoff. There was a minor surprise in the quarterfinals yesterday, when Rosenberg upset Eilon Sinair 8-6, 6-8, 6-3. Topseeded Frischer, just 18. was given a good workout by Anthony Harris, before beating the promising 15-year-old new immigrant from Zimbabwe-Rhodesia 6-4, 6-2.

The line-up in the girls' under-18 semi-finals is Dalla Soltz versus Rakefet Binyamini, and Rella Winkler against Orly Bialostocki.

Three hundred youngsters from Upper Galilee to the Negev are competing in the championships.

TA Maccabi vs. J'lem Betar on Saturday

Post Sports Reporter

TEL AVIV. - The soccer season kicks off at the Ramat Gan stadium at 5:30 p.m. on Saturday with the big pre-season game between National League champions Tel Aviv Maccabi and cupwinners Jerusalem

Jerusalem Betar will be handicapped by the fact that star midfield player Uri Malmillian was in-jured while training with the national team this week, and will be out of action on Saturday. Malmillian scored three goals in a training game against Rishon Lezion, and national team coach Emanuel Sheffer put him on again immediately to play a second game against Ramat Gan Hapoel. It was after 130 minutes of football that Malmillian was hurt.

The national team probables will be released from their training to join their clubs over the weekend. On Sunday Sheffer will call them again for final preparations prior to the game against Eintracht Frankfurt at the Ramat Gan stadium next Tuesday.

On Saturday, Haifa Hapoel and Haifa Maccabi face each other in a derby for the Mayor's Cup. Haifa referee Avraham Klein will be in charge of the Betar-Maccabi clash at the Ramat Gan stadium. In the cup final at the end of last season. Jerusalem Betar beat Tel Aviv Maccabi 2-1.

Black Hebrews softball team wins in debut

Post Sports Reporter TEL AVIV. - The Black Hehrews' newly formed softball team on Tuesday made an auspicious debut with a resounding 29-5 victory over an "all star' Tel Aviv IX in Dimona.

The visitors, consisting of members of the American embassy. Tel Aviv Maccabi and Bernie's Bottie Club teams, were somewhat at a disadvantage by having to play ac-cording to slow-pitch rules they are not accustomed to.

The Israel Softball League's same three Tel Aviv teams - plus the AACI - will take part in a special round-robin tournament aponsored by Israel Maccabi, which starts on Saturday at the Yarkon Park's "Sportek" complex here, with games at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. The event will continue every weekend

British gov't attacks planned S. African UK rugby tour

LONDON (Reuter). - The British government late Tuesday night stepped into a growing controversy here over an invitation to a multiracial South African Rugby Union team to play eight matches in Britain and Ireland in October.

A spokesman for the Department of the Environment said Sports Minister Hector Monro was writing to the four home rugby unions who amounced the invitation on Monday to tell them the planned tour was ":" advised."

In a statement issued even before Munro's letter was delivered, an oificial of the home rugby unions yesterday criticized opposition to the John Hart, secretary of the committee of the home unions (England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales), also spoke out against the Gleneagies agreement, which requires Com-monwealth countries to discourage sport contacts with South Africa.

"Nothing we are doing impinges on other sports. What is wrong in in-viting a multi-racial team here?"

Hart disagreed with the widelyexpressed view that the tour, by the South African "Barbarians," a multi-raciai team, could lead to Britain being barred from the Olympic games in Moscow next year. "There is no way in which we are preventing anybody going to Moscow," he said. "We are concern-ed only with rugby football." He said his committee would meet to consider any correspondence from

The announcement of Monro's letter to the rugby unions came after the South African non-racial Olympie Committee (SAN-ROC) earlier on Tuesday had asked him to take steps to stop the tour from taking SAN-ROC chairman Sam Ram samy said in a letter to the minister the tour would be a gross disregard "of the Gienesgies agreement and of UN resolutions on sporting contacts with South Africa." He called on Monro to intervene immediately "to stop this highly irresponsible action from proceeding."

The home unions' determination to maintain rugby contacts with South Africa suggests that a tour by the British Lions team to South Africa next year is still possible.

In 1975, black African nations walked out of the Montreal Olympics because of the participation of New Zealand, whose rugby union team toured South Africa that year.

British anti-apartheid spokesman Mike Terry, who said on Tuesday that demonstrations would be arranged at the South Africans' matches if the tour goes on, announced yesterday that a meeting of the four British Isles countries' antiapartheid groups is being arranged for September 18 in Londo "We shall discuss what demonstrations we can make should the tour go ahead," he said.

because of a muscle injury.

Coe, who holds the 800, 1,500 and mile marks, injured his leg on Tuesday night while training in a London suburb, an organizer of tomorrow's international meet in London said

Coe was training in Richmond Park when he was stopped by police who said he was causing an obstruction by running on a narrow road, simmer in dull summer session

Stocks & bonds—

TEL AVIV. — The shares of the First International Bank of Israel provided the main fireworks in what was otherwise a dull summer session on the Tel Aviv Stock Ex-AN HOCK change. The shares jumped by 12 points to 516 on a moderate turnover of IL545,000. With in-tial demand IL509,000 it would seem that FIRI shareholders are not too anxious to dispose of their holdings and will only do so at much higher price levels. So far this week FIBI shares have increased in price by 8.6 per cent, and in the last nine sessions by about 11 per cent.

Otherwise, the share market gave inrestors little to cheer about as prices were mixed. Despite the general lassitude and lack of a clear trend, there was a small increase in trading turnovers which stood at IL75.7m. The Israel pound, for the second con-secutive day, traded unchanged against the Hitle excitement as the share market as most sectors were stable. Those groups whose prices changed moved less than 1 per cent in Wher direction. Trading activity in bonds increased, to the market report By JOSEPH MORGENSTERN Post Finance Reporter

Except for the sparkling action of FIBL there was little activity among commercial banks, IDB and Union Bank were unchanged. Mizrahi (r), Hapoalim and Leumi each gained one point. General Bank shares were ahead by three points, and led the most active list. ¿

Trading was quiet among mortgage bank shares and the only meaningful change was chalked up by Tefahot (b), which gained 13 points to 330.

Prices were mixed among insurance shares, but price action was stronger. Zur (r) was almost 7 per cent higher at 231. The shares are now trading ex-dividend and exbonus. Arych reached 500 after a 20 point rise in price. Yardenia IL1 rose by 5.4 per cent to 195. Losses were generally very moderate in

The land development and real estate group of shares came up with its own paradox. Property and Building, earlier this week, announced a doubling of its semi-annual profits. The company also announced a new financing issue, however the news was not well received by investors. Yesterday the offer of Property and Building shares was more than IL770,000, although its price remained unchanged. Mehadrin was 64 points higher, an increase of 6.3 per cent. Rassco shares continued to tumble, with the preferred falling by 4.2 per cent while the or-dinary shares dropped by almost 7 per cent. Industrials, generally, were also mixed, but three shares were strongly shead. These included: Argaman (r), 6.5 per cent higher; Phoenicia, 5.1 per cent higher as a result of a "buyers only" situation; and Arad, which gained 7.8 per cent to 441.

Elgar and Ampa suffered reverses in an otherwise mixed investment company sector. Elgar (r) was down by 58 points to 778, a loss of almost 7 per cent. Ampa backtracked by 37 points, a loss of 6.2 per cent, to 558.

WASHINGTON (AP) foreign trade deficit narrowed to $1.1b. last month despite a record bill for imported oil, the U.S. Commerce Department said this

The July merchandise trade deficit, which marked the 38th consecutive month in which imports have exceeded exports, was down from the $1.9b. of June and was the lowest since March.

The improvement in the Merchandise Trade Balance occurred even though the U.S. paid a record $4.8b. for petroleum-product imports in July

The figure was the largest since 4.6b. reported in March 1977, Commerce data showed, and it reflects the crude oil price increase put in effect by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries on

The Merchandise Trade Balance improved in spite of the rising oil-import costs because of the continued good performance of U.S. ex-

U.S. exports rose to a record $15.7b. in July, up 4.2 Imports, meanwhile, fell from the record level of $16.9 b. in . $16.7 b. in July.

Among the import categories showing declines were food and live animals, chemicals, ores and passenger cars. One analyst speculated that the drop in car imports reflected a supply shortage. Oil imports continued to be a problem, with volume increasing 1.8 per cent in July to 245.9 million barrels. The figure is just under the 8.2

million barrel-per-day quota that President Carter has set for the nation as part of his energy policy. As a result of the rising oil prices, the U.S. trade deficit with the Opec members rose to $2.3b. in July, compared with $1.8m. in the previous

The closely watched trade deficit with Japan declined from $778.1m. in June to $484.7m. in July.

SUGAR - Continues to hold its recent rally gains, although it has yet to break above resistance evident at WOOL - Has now established initial support at 422 cents and appears to be consolidating earlier gains. The more extensive support evident between 415 cents and 400 suggests that the next significant move will be upwards.

MINOR METALS - Cadmium, palladium and wolfram are all rallying from support levels and can extend these gains.

GOLD — Has moved decisively through its July high at $307. Support between that price and $300 sh now limit the downside risk and this three-year bull market appears certain to continue upwards.

PLATINUM - Even though platinum has recently been the least strong precious metal, and has rallied back to an area of potential resistance near £185, this recovery could carry further, given the strength of gold and silver.

ZINC — Has failed to maintain the move below the July low at $296 and it is worth noting the support en-countered below $300 in 1975 and 1978. Zinc should now test the next area of resistance evident between approximately $310 and $325. LEAD - Has now cut this month's downward trend, after establishing support at £513. Only a move below this level could confirm lower objectives and leave it more likely to challenge the recent top area evident between £540 and £570.

GOLD COINS - Old sovereigns are leading other gold coins into new high ground and all have established sufficient support during the last two months to propel prices higher.

Zaire devalues

its currency again KINSHASA (UPI). - The Zairean government has devalued its currency by 25 per cent, government sources confirmed yesterday.

This is the fifth devaluation in less than a year. It results from the "stabilisation plan" imposed on Zaire by the International Monetary Fund, banking sources said.

The country's currency, the Zaire, now stands at $0.47, compared with the previous rate of $0.62, they add-

London Commodities

SILVER -- Silver's upward surge has now carried it into new high ground but, given the extent of the previous fall, this metal is probably in a base-building phase prior to an eventual recovery.

POTATOES - Have failed to maintain the break above the previous peaks, near Fl22.50, but rice has returned to an area of previous support, which should now limit the downside risk.

SOYABEAN MEAL - Any further easing from this level would indicate an inability to maintain a recovery at this time, although support from the July and August lows should contain the downside risk.

GRAINS - Wheat is leading the grains lower, having repeatedly encountered resistance at the higher levels. Barley's support level is at £95, and penetration would confirm lower objectives.

COCOA - Has established a sideways trading range between £1,-425 and £1,550, and given the extent of the previous fall, those could be the prejude to an eventual recovery. Only a move below £1,425 would confirm a further downward risk.

COFFEE - After a brief pause near £1,825, coffee is now moving into the next area of resistance, evident between £1,850 and £1,925. There is no sign that this rally is over.

COPPER - Has established further support near £875 and the present pattern resembles a consolidation of the gains seen earlier this month. A move through the recent highs at £908 would confirm further upside TIN - The patter of tin is characterized by more overhead supply than most other metals.

Strikes and counter strikes

SHOULD THE U.S. disregard its commitment to Israel, and start talking to the PLO though that organization has not even deigned to pay the merest lip service to Resolution 242?

A growing number of leading Americans appears to have already given an affirmative answer to this question. The best known among them is perhaps Andrew Young, the departing U.S. ambassador to the UN, who may soon become the top American champion of the Palestinian cause.

Another one is George W. Ball, Under Secretary of State under Presidents Kennedy and (for a while) Johnson, author of the charming idea of saving Israel "in spite of herself." In an article this week Mr. Ball has urged the Carter Administration to disengage itself from 'Kissinger's self-denying ordinance regarding the PLO," or run the risk of losing Arab oil.

This company has now been joined by John Connally, a former Democratic Governor of Texas and a serious contender for the Republican nomination for president. In a speech in Florida, he has suggested that while it might be premature to recognize the PLO, it is important for the U.S. to open a dialogue with it in order to help solve the Palestinian problem. What Mr. Connally has done is unprecedented in the annals of American politics during the past several decades. Until now, it has been the uniform practice of presidential candidates to actively woo the Jewish vote, by presenting themselves as better friends of Israel than the incumbent president. Their campaign pledges might later come to haunt them, if they made it to the White House, but this has not, so far, deterred the next generation of contenders from following the example. Connally has for all the world given up on the Jewish vote.

With his background in Texas oil, and his rock-ribbed conservatism, Mr. Connally would not, it's true, have been in any case an especially attractive candidate for American Jews, even at a time of Jewish disenchantment with President Carter. Perhaps, on the other hand, Mr. Counally believes that he could win some support among the blacks, who are also not his most natural constituency, by taking their side against the Jews.

What is obvious is that Mr. Connally, whose political astuteness is not in question, is starting out on the premise that he can defy Jewish opinion because Israel's reputation among the U.S. people as a whole is on the skids.

This may be a misreading of the facts. Israel still outpolls the PLO three to one as a true seeker of peace, and even the blacks have not yet indicated any clear preference for the PLO over Israel in a recent Gallup poll. Yet only a few years ago all but the tiniest handful of Americans, including the blacks, would simply have turned their noses at the PLO. Which may suggest

So, apparently, Mr. Commally believes. And the mere fact that he does ought to set some heads in Jerusalem a-thinking.

A (troubling) sign of the times

THE BRUTALITY Of the strike action taken by electricity workers on Tuesday was, strangely enough, appropriate, in that it has brought the problem of labour relations to crisis point.

By shutting down current and paralysing whole sections of the national life - sections which have no possible connection with the wage dispute agitating the Israel Electric Corporation — the works committee has proved finally that the traditional system of easy-come, easy-go in wage bargaining does not work.

Up to now collective agreements could be torn up, the Government's pay policy ignored and the law of the land flouted (with only the mildest penalties) because it was thought best that the two disputing sides should come to terms, never mind what formula was reached.

But letting trade union activists run on such a loose rein has brought them to hit up against each other, producing - in this case — deadlock.

The problem afflicting the IEC is that interest groups within the company have irreconcilable demands. The top grades want wider pay differentials. The lower grades want the differentials to remain unchanged.

The problem affects the whole public service. The Engineers Union struck earlier this year for the umpteenth time to widen the gap. The concession they gained was called the 'responsibility allowance," and has been extended to others.

The lower grades now plan, also for the umpteenth time, to hit back. The electricity workers have offered themselves as the challenger, with the technicians in the Communications Ministry now hard on their heels. The demand of both is the same: the responsibility allowance.

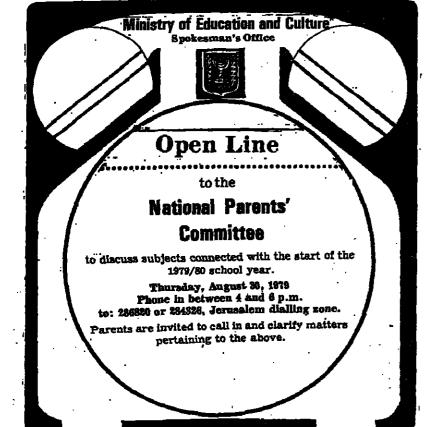

When professional and non-professional unions compete with each other, it is a sign that the Histadrut has not been doing its job. Certain matters must be decided at the highest level; they cannot be left to chance conflicts within individual companies.

Fortunately the present matter is to be settled at last by the arbitration of two top men: Energy Minister Yitzhak Moda'i, representing the Government, and Histadrut Secretary-General Yeruham Meshel, representing the trade union movement. They are the right authority to decide once and for all what the differential should be. Their verdict will be a precedent for the whole economy.

The workers' representatives in the IEC agreed to arbitration, the militant action committees did not; hence the violent outbreak on Tuesday. This has proved to be the last straw.

The Treasury now proposes, as a new policy for the whole economy, a freeze of existing collective agreements. They should not be opened for re-negotiation until their expiry date. Strike damage, should it occur, will be minimised (it is suggested) by using the resources of the state to operate essential services, where necessary and where possible.

The object of these proposals is to stop the vicious circle of strike and counter-strike, so as to restore a measure of harmony in labour relations. Such a resolute initiative is overdue by now, even though it cannot of course, by itself, solve the country's basic economic problems.

TORTURED BY BUREAUCRACY

Post reporter JOAN BORSTEN describes some skirmishes with bureaucracy in this third article on housing in Jerusalem.

"I WANT to sell this key-money flat so that we can rent something in Ramat Eshkol for IL3,500 a month, so that I can send my wif? to Prazot to demand a rent subsidy," confides Yaacov B., an easy-going janitor who brings home IL7,000 per month from Hadassah Hospital. He points out that if they stay put, it will be years before they qualify for a mortgage from Prazot, the joint municipality-government housing authority, and they'll all be crazy before then. "Six people just cannot live in two tiny rooms, 28 square metres altogether. But if I get Prazot to start paying half of my rent, I'm putting pressure on them and increasing our eligibility immediately. To get something from Prazot in a reasonable time, you have to know

Proudly, Yaacov shows off the improvements he has made over the past six years in the apartment, located on the roof of an Arab-style house in Beit Israel, a tiny non-Orthodox island in a sea of North Jerusalem Shabbat-observant neighbourhoods. Every inch of the apartment is being utilized, every niche has been converted into storage space. But the kitchen table is wedged between a crib and a bed in the room where Yaacov's four young daughters sleep, and there is no room in the kitchen for a refrigerator.

"We've tried to make do with what we can afford," says Yaacov, "but this is impossible. I don't have any savings, so a Housing Ministry mortgage won't suffice. Besides, with the linkage and interest, I can't afford the repayments on my salary. My only solution is Prazot, and they are unbelievably difficult to deal with."

"We need three-and-a-half rooms," interjects his wife. "If we had even three rooms we wouldn't be on edge all the time, we wouldn't be at each other's throats, it wouldn't take me all day to clean the flat. Our kids wouldn't be sick all the time. Sure some of it is normal, but a lot is psychological. And Yaacov wouldn't have an ulcer.

YAACOV nods. Two years ago when he applied to Prazot for help he was depressed and dejected by the situation. His mood has gone from bad to

"I get so upset sometimes that I just give up and do nothing for months," he says. "It's like banging your head against a wall. They are inefficient and bureaucratic. And they don't give a damn.

'Look what happened when I tried to increase our chances of getting a house by getting a doctor to write them a note about my ulcer. The Prazot official told me I hadn't sent the forms. But I had, and by registered mail. The Post Office even certified that my letter had been delivered to a particular staff member who signed for it.

"Okay, they were wrong, I was right. But so what? Prazot insisted on my producing copies of the letters written by the doctor and the social worker, and that has taken months, because the social worker had quit his job, and his replacements kept

"So now I'm going to try to hurry them up this way, by moving into a rented flat. What else can I do? I'm tired of fighting with them, I'm tired of living like this. Believe me, if I had anyone abroad I would sell everything, pick up the kids and leave. It can't be as bad any place

DAVID L. is also tired of fighting with Prazot — "and all I'm asking is for a decent place to live until I finish the army." David is 19, his wife Yehudit 1612, his daughter three months old. "We had to get married, so we did. First we lived with my grandmother, who has three rooms, but we couldn't get along. So we moved into a one-room flat and asked Prazot for help. Our application wasn't approved. We couldn't afford the rent on that flat, so we moved in with my parents, both of whom are blind. They have four rooms which they were already sharing with my two sisters, one brother and my other grandmother. Prazot then reconsidered our case, and gave us some "points," but they weren't enough to make us eligible for anything.

"We finally got help from them after Yehudit had a nervous breakdown. It was a combination of having the baby, living in such crowded conditions, and being close to her parents. They used to beat her a lot and tell her how terrible she was. The doctor wrote Prazot a letter saying that if they didn't find a solution for us, Yehudit wouldn't be released from hospital, because if she returned to the same conditions she would have another Prazot then upgraded David and Yehudit from 450 to 2,200 points, which ensures them a rent subsidy of IL2,300 per month or a mortgage of IL675.000.

'After fighting so hard to qualify with Prazot, I look at what they give me and wonder why I bothered to spend all that energy," says David. "IL875,000 buys me nothing unless I already have IL 200,000, and even if I do, where will I get the IL8,800 a month - linked - to pay them back? The army will pay me IL5,000 per I find anything to rent for IL2,300 which is fit for a wife and baby? Again, I'm only going to be getting IL5,000 and Yehudit can't work. If I put IL2,500 of my pay towards rent, we have IL2,500 to live on. That's not enough.

"It seems to me that if Prazot's job is really to help those who can't help themselves, they should do so. Going halfway is no solution for people like

Local social workers agree. Each has a list of stories about Jerusalemites in need of housing who are being stymied rather than helped by Prazot.

Large families living in two crowd ed rooms have been waiting eight years for a solution. Small families living in one crowded room have been waiting for six. Very large families have been given mortgages of over Ham. — which they will clearly never be able to repay — to buy four- and five-room flats which are today selling for IL2m. or more. Families who miraculously find something to buy are frequently denied their mortgages when a Prazot assessor decides that the property in question isn't worth what the owner is asking. Large families are granted a mortgage and told to find themselves a house when the only members capable of househunting are teenaged children.

IN THE SAME WAY as lowermiddle-class Jerusalem complains about Prazot, new immigrants who don't buy on the private market complain about Amidar, the government agency that sells public housing to olim.

"Amidar is supposed to sell public housing to them," says Dr. Chaim Simons, a dentist from England who immigrated to Kiryat Arba a year ago with his wife, Dina, and their sive children. Dr. Simons was allocated a four-room, 89 sq.m. apartment in a block owned by Amidar. Other immigrants were allocated almost identical flats in a nearby block owned by another government company, Shikun

Dr. Simons, clutching a fat file of correspondence, pulls out a wellworn copy of "Guide for the Oleh," an Absorption Ministry publication. 'It says here clearly that once I have lived in a government flat for three months, I have the right to purchase it. So last November 29 I wrote Amidar asking for the price. That letter, which I registered, was ignored, and so was a similar registered letter sent on January 8. "Finally I got smart, and on January 29 I sent a third letter, not to Amidar in Kiryat Arba but to Amidar Jerusalem, with a carbon copy to the Absorption Ministry."

When Amidar Jerusalem informed Simons they did not have the necessary "data" in their office, the dentist wrote angrily to Housing and Absorption Minister David Levy. He also sent letters to the daily papers and several Knesset members. The Absorption Ministry finally answered him in March. "The houses are now for sale." they wrote. but Amidar cannot be forced to seil them to you at the November price, even though that is when you

Finally, after Simons and his friends had bombarded the Absorption Ministry, the Housing Ministry, the Kiryat Arba local council, and numerous Knesset members with letters, Amidar did set a price for the immigrant flats.

own flat, which is smaller, was therefore probably worth IL-$10,000.

However, Amidar insisted that "I was shocked," says Simons. "ILA25,000 for my flat. I figure that is probably twice as much as Amidar would have asked in November. And Amidar insists these are the June prices, so we are not eligible for the mortgages that went into effect on July 1. This means I have to come up with IL235,000 in cash. Last November I would only have needed something like IL80,000. Even in foreign currency, the difference is enormous - I have to pay about three times as much as I would have had to then.'

ANOTHER immigrant who found it difficult to deal with Amidar is a young Englishwoman in her thirties. Unable to finance a flat on the private market, Claudia took the advice of a friend and applied to the Appeals Commission of the Absorption Ministry for a studio apartment. The friend had been allocated such fiat in East Talplot the previous September on the grounds that she was single and had immigrated to Amidar's conditions had been most generous — either rent the flat for a few hundred pounds a month or buy it for IL250,000. The immigrant chose to buy it and was asked to pay Amidar IL50,000. The remaining IL200,000 became a mortgage, to be paid off at IL1,000 per month — un-

Claudia was informed very

some time to even see the interior of the apartment.

When she went to look at the exterior, she discovered that the rest of the tenants had airendy moved in-Still, Prudovsky maintained, her flatwas not ready because "the key is still with the building contractor. And although Claudia pestered his continually, Prudovsky could not tell her how much the flat would eventually cost.

That was in June. Last month, although Amidar had attil not receive ed the key, Prudovsky agreed to "look up" the price of Claudia's fist To her horror, he announced that with her "new immigrant discounts 20 per cent" the price was IL 800,80 and then two weeks later IL850.06 if Claudia decided to buy the on room flat, she would have to preaming IL825,000 she could pay off in a long term mortgage, approximately one third of which would be linked to the

She protested that the price cou not possibly have gone up more than two-and-a-half times in less than year. Prudovsky replied that would probably be even higher b the time she moved in.

"I feel absolutely desolate," say Claudia, "because the IL325.0 already represents the maximus amount of money I can possible raise, and that includes a loan from the British Zionist Federation. If the price goes any higher, I won't be able to buy the flat. This was my last hope, because I was priced out of the private market long ago.

"I thought the Ministry of Absorption and Amidar were supposed to be helping new immigrants. Instead, they're just making things imposs ble for us."

THE BEDUIN BILL

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir, - I would like to comment on Lesley Hazleton's article of August 9 about the Negev Lands Acquisition Law (Peace Treaty with Egypt).

In the public discussion concerning the expropriation of Negev land to build a military air base at Tel Malhata due to the necessity of evacuating our Sinai airforce bases in compliance with the peace treaty with Egypt, nobody denies three facts: the necessity to build the airfield; its location as the only possible one according to defence authorities; and the absolute urgency of building it rapidly to have it at least partly completed by the time we evacuate the Sinai airfields three years after the signature of the peace treaty.

Under these conditions, it was impossible to use the existing land expropriation ordinance of 1943 — a Mandatory law still in force for expropriating lands for public use and not necessarily for defence purposes. Expropriation procedures under this law usually take several years and if this law had been used for the lands needed for the Tel Malhata air base, it would have been impossible to start building it for many years. In the meantime, Israel would have been vulnerable and have no airfield to replace the Eitan and Etzion airfields which we are to evacuate in less than three years.

Therefore, a bill was drawn up, strictly limited to the lands required for the Tel Malhata air base and the relocation of the inhabitants who will be displaced as a result thereof. This bill offers the Beduin appropriate financial compensation in any of three ways, which they are free to choose from:

1. Financial compensation in accordance with the same Mandatory land ordinance of 1948 which is still in force via the competent court. 2. Financial compensation under the same law, but via a claims committee to be set up under the new bill, on condition the appellant is the proprietor of the land. 3. Compensation in the form of provements in one of the Beduin settlements already in existence or being built. Thus, all the Bedwin's financial rights are protected, either under the existing laws or the new bill, as cash, land, water and housing im-they wish. Compensation under the new law is based on the formula offered the Beduin by the Alignment Government in 1976 and in monetary terms is obviously far more generous. I would also like to stress the Government's readiness to discuss and give favourable consideration to pertinent suggestions concerning the proposed law. Therefore, there was ecessity for "heavy pressure" and there was no such pressure brought to bear by the Alignment, only frank and open discussion which resulted in the Minister of Justice agreeing, in the name of the Government, to three amendments to the proposed law: cancellation of the paragraph under which the boundarles of the expropriated land could be altered if necessary; addition of a representative of the public to the claims committee; and permission to appeal the committee's decisions on every subject and not only on juridical matters.

In view of the special urgency of passing the law as rapidly as possible to speed up work on the airfield. the Government asked the Knesset to complete its first reading of the law during the summer session, so that the proposed law could be dis-

The Government suggested to the Beduin who are living on the land earmarked for ex-propriation that they use these three months to start immediate negotiations on their financial claims; if, as a result, it becomes obvious that it is possible to settle their claims in this period of time without resorting to the new law, as the Alignment maintains, then this law will not be presented for a second and third reading. But the procedure required to enact the law will have been completed during the Knesset recess, thus preventing the loss of valuable time in case the law is re-The Negev Lands Acquisition Law is the obvious consequence of the situation to which Israel agreed when it signed the peace treaty with Egypt. We undertook to evacuate the Sinal with its powerful security network, including two of the most modern and comprehensive air bases. This necessitates the immediate building of other airfields in the Negev. For two of them, we found uninhabited land and for the third one, at Tel Malhata, we have to evacuate 1,000 Beduin families, most of whom live on state land. The law which was drawn up for this purpose, and for this purpose only, guarantees full compensation and resettlement to all those who have to be evacuated while carefully protecting all their rights, including the right to have the rate of compensation fixed by a court of law. When people intentionally ignore the motives which forced the state of Israel to table this law, they are closing their eyes to objective limitations which cannot be sidestepped and are giving an unbalanced interpretation to the proposed law, which ensures generous financial compensation in comparison with existing expropriation laws.

GOINGS ON AT BATSHEVA

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir. — The management of the Batsheva Dance Company wishes to point out certain inaccuracies in Mark Segal's comments ("Public faces" — August 8).
1) Mr. Bill Strum, our unsalaried

General Manager, is not thinking of leaving the company. Mr. Strum is a partner in an office-cleaning company in New York, which he attends to twice a year for several weeks each visit. Mr. Strum wishes to state that he has no impresario's office in Tel Aviv.

2) Mr. Paul Sanasardo has been re-appointed as Artistic Director for the season 1979-1980, so there is no question of hiring anyone else for this position at the present time. We are not aware of any members of the Public Committee who have exressed "wonder" over this matter.

Parents c'tees plan strikes at start of new school year

By ALAN ELSNER

Jerusalem Post Reporter TEL AVIV. — Parents committees of several schools around the country said yesterday they would strike their children's schools on Sunday as the school year starts, Yitzhak Efron, chairman of the National Parents Committee told The Jerusalem Post last night.

Israel, U.S. to cooperate on labour affairs, officials say

By HAIM SHAPIRO Jerusalem Post Reporter

A cooperation agreement covering employment and training, occupational health and work safety, and labour-management relagions was announced last night by U.S. Labour Secretary Ray Marshall and Labour and Social Affairs Minister Israel Katz.

Marshall's four-day stay included meetings with Histadrut and industrial leaders, the latter headed by Avraham Shavit, and visits to agricultural settlements. In a meeting with the Israel Productivity Institute, Marshall suggested cooperation between the institute and U.S. bodies on methods of measuring productivity.

On a personal note, Marshall yesterday planted a tree in memory of his 16-year-old son Christopher, who died a month ago. In an interview with The Jerusalem Posí, Marshall said he was "encouraged" by recent developments in the International Labour Organization. Although he could not predict world body, which it left in 1977, after a series of Arab-inspired resolutions condemning Israel and admitting the PLO as an observer. he said the ILO had changed as a result of the U.S. move. Marshall heads a U.S. government committee due to meet soon to reconsider ILO membership. He said the U.S. withdrawal had been 'beneficial," and the ILO had introduced some safeguards, although not as many as he would have liked. Marshall said he saw no signs of erosion in U.S. labour's traditional support for Israel. George Meany, head of the AFL-CIO, is a steadfast friend of Israel and his likely successor, Lane Kirland, is if possible, even more committed.

Marshall pointed to growing success in the U.S. in training problem youth and reducing unemployment among the disadvan-taged. He predicted the U.S. would suffer a labour shortage in the 1980s, related to a drop in the working population and a growing need to conserve energy sources.

Weizman, Irraeli scorres said at insist that just building part of the next fighter and assembling it is Israel will not be enough in an wants to participate in the whole process - from blueprints to mera cutting to assembly

While Pentagen official acknowledge that such full page ticipation would help IAI to turn our sophisticated fighters, they said as undesirable side effect would be what is euphemistically called "the proliferation problem. "Supposing," said one official, "that 500 new fighters would have to be built to make it economically feasible to set up a production line in Israel, And supposing Israel needs only 50 or 100 of the planes. What happens to the rest of them?" Carter has pledged to curb the proliferation of sophisticated U.S. weapons around the world. Some U.S. officials believe that helping another country produce the latest weapons, with the risk of their being sold eventually to third countries, runs counter to that piedge.

Although the U.S. already has entered into co-production of air. planes with several countries, of ficials contend that helping Israel produce an advanced fighter in the volatile Middle East would be a riskier undertaking.

However, turning Israel down fiat on its request for co-production of a modern fighter might force Israel to go it alone, as difficult and expensive as that would be. The U.S., if it had not supplied the engine or anything else for the resulting fighter, would not have the right to control sales outside Israel. Weizman is prepared to make that argument, sources said, when he meets with Brown The betting within the Pentagon is that this will help focus the discussions on which U.S. fighter, and how much of it, the Carter administration is willing to let Israel manufacture.

Israel sought to get production rights for the F-16 when the Carter administration was putting together its Middle East arms package in 1978. Pentagon officials said Israel's request was not rejected, although the administration was not enthusiastic. The Israelis, officials said, opted instead for getting the F-16 fighters destined for the shah of Iran before he was deposed. That choice, according to the Pentagon, enabled Israel to obtain the first batch of the promised 75 F-16s at an earlier date.

Much to the distress of General Dynamics, which manufactures the F-16, Israeli officials are now exhibiting interest in buying the competing F-18 fighter. Why they are doing this, after ordering the F-16, to the aubject of much speculation inside and outside the Pentagon.

The Jerusalem Post military correspondent points out, however, that Israel is not interested in building the General Dynamics F-16 fighter, but in one of two models of the F 15: 2: the U.S. Navy model currently in production with McDonnell-Douglas. or the land-based version of the same aircraft still only in the plan ning stage at Northrop.

According to foreign sources, bu. Israel Aircraft Industries has beta asked to examine the two versions d the aircraft by the Defence Ministr and the Israel Air Froce, and decide which of the two planes it would prefer to build under licence or coproduce in Israel.

The general issue of arms supplies to Israel is also expected to get a thorough review because of congressional charges that Israel violated American conditions of sale in using U.S.-supplied arms against (WPNS, Reuter)
